

Theodore F. MOLT (1795-1856) came to Quebec in 1822 where he taught piano, organ, violin and voice and wrote the first Canadian bilingual instruction book. He also invented the Chromatometer teaching device, a box with a sounding board, strings, movable bridge and a damper, which produced sounds at the turn of a knob.

Click on the "◀◀" button above to return to the text.