Subject: RE: Cultus Sockeye Recovery Team: advice on Socio-economic analysis

I think we should have a short call to discuss this, including Jim Wild. I would like to pass along my impressions from a meeting I held recently with the Cultus and the Sakinaw teams respectively. Ottawa has now got quite excited about this and we are seeking to set up a call to discuss this and the other petitions coming in to Ministers and the PM. John

I agree with Paul, and would like to further note that this serves to highlight the confusing set of accountabilities we have established for SARA recovery planning. My understanding is that I am the accountable manager for SARA Recovery Planning, yet I was not even copied on the initial memo. Neil has missed the two people who should be addressing this in leaving Jim and I out of the loop

Paul: I am concerned that Neil has bypassed the Area Director who is the logical person in the chain of command to handle this letter - either to respond directly or to refer it on to others for response. The letter from Neil should have gone to Jim and then he should refer it on as necessary. I am concerned that the group respect the chain of command. I think we should write quickly back to Neil under your signature, thanking him for the letter, note that in the future Jim should be the first point of contact and indicate that in this instance you will respond shortly to the group's points. Paul

We will need a response for this - It seems to me that we may want to do this quickly.

Paul: The attached letter (also send by regular mail) relates to the recent posting on the Canada Gazette of the Minister of the Environment's proposal to not list Cultus sockeye under SARA. Our letter does not address the proposed decision itself; rather, it raises concerns specific to the Team's mandate regarding the socio-economic analysis that forms the basis of the recommendation. The letter results from considerable discussion and reflects a consensus opinion of the full Cultus Sockeye Recovery Team. The Team would be happy to discuss our concerns in greater detail with you or your staff. Neil
